Early Childhood Research & Practice

Lilian G. Katz, Editor
Jean Mendoza, Associate Editor

A peer-reviewed Internet journal in English and Spanish on the development, care, and education of young children

Early Childhood Research & Practice (ECRP), an Internet journal, is currently seeking submissions in either English or Spanish that address issues related to the development, care, and education of children from birth to approximately age 8. ECRP focuses mainly on research with clear implications for practice. The journal contains articles on practice-related research and development, issues related to teaching, teacher education, parent participation and policy, and emerging practices related to the field.

The first peer-reviewed early childhood education journal available only on the Internet, and in both English and Spanish, ECRP combines the quality ensured by peer review with the flexibility and enhancements made possible by an electronic format. Video, sound, hypertext links, searching capabilities, re-analyzable data sets, and the interactivity of the Internet—as well as text and graphics—are offered in ECRP.

Early Childhood Research & Practice is of interest to researchers, practitioners, teacher educators, program planners, policy makers, decision makers, administrators, and parents.

Early Childhood Research & Practice can be accessed at:

General information and author guidelines are also available on the journal's Web site.

Questions can be sent to the ECRP editors by email at ecrp@uiuc.edu.
